The risk of contamination exists for clothing worn in the workplace. The recommendation is to change from “street clothes” to work clothes including footwear. Staff should change into work wear before starting their shift and then change back again before departing the work place. The staff work wear should be deposited into a safe functional depository. Harco can provide hospital quality hampers and bags. Plastic bags will contain any bacteria or viruses safely during transport to the laundry area.

- Clothes worn in the office must not be worn outside of the office (e.g., home), and should be laundered after every shift.
- Laundry bins/containers should be lined with an impermeable membrane such as a plastic liner. This avoids cross contamination. The Harco soiled linen bags have been tested to survive a 4 storey drop with 10 pounds of laundry without rupture.
- Harco soiled linen hampers have a steel lid that is easily sanitized. The pedal opening keeps hands clean by eliminating another “hot zone” for contamination. The lid features soft close dampers to keep down stressful noisy “bangs and clangs”.
